

Privacy Statement

Statement

The Statement describes how Coast and Country Primary Care (CCPC) manages and stores your personal information in accordance with the Australian Privacy Principles (APP) and Privacy Act 1988 (Privacy Act).

The Statement aims to:

- Describe our personal information handling practices and enhance the transparency of our operations.
- Give people a better and more complete understanding of the sort of personal information that we hold, and the way we handle that information.
- Outline how people can complain or report a breach of our responsibilities regarding privacy, and how we will handle such complaints.

Scope

This Statement applies to all situations in which we collect, hold, use, and disclose personal information. This includes (but is not limited to) the personal information we obtain and hold in relation to:

- Clients and patients to whom we provide mental health care, disability, primary health, and related services.
- Contracted care providers.
- Members of the public who utilise our websites, take part in surveys and/or participate in events we organise.

Statistical information that is used for service delivery reporting is de-identified and aggregated to a level that makes the identification of individuals impossible. It is therefore not personal information as defined and is not covered by this Statement.

Principles & Commitments

In the following Statement, 'we' refers to the organisation, staff, and programs of CCPC, 'you' refers to any person who engages with CCPC, and 'your information' is any personal information we collect from or about you to provide services.

At CCPC, we respect your right to privacy, and uphold your right to have your personal information privacy maintained. Protecting privacy when handling personal information is very important to us.

When we collect or are given your personal information, it imposes a responsibility upon us to protect that information and maintain the trust that has been given. We do this in accordance with our legal obligations and in line with reasonable expectations.

We make sure that each person providing personal information is informed about and understands the purpose of collecting the information and how it will be used.

Privacy Statement

Where information is provided by a third party, we ensure we have the informed consent of the person concerned.

We commit to collecting, holding, and using personal information appropriately, for the use/s for which we hold it, and in accordance with the Privacy Act. Further, we take all reasonable steps to protect personal information from unauthorised disclosure, loss, misuse, or alteration.

Unless it is noted expressly in this Statement, we do not make distinction between the handling of personal information and sensitive information (including health information). We treat all information with the same levels of respect, and the same security protections.

Collection of Personal Information

At CCPC, we collect, hold, and use a range of personal information through our business.

What Information we Collect and Hold

We collect personal information only for purposes that are directly related to the services and activities of CCPC. For most people, we collect and hold names and contact details (phone, address, email). These details allow us to identify and communicate with you for our business purposes.

In addition, we collect and hold:

- If you are a patient or client, details such as date of birth and government identifiers to allow us to identify you and communicate with relevant agencies. We may also collect and hold certain health information and sensitive information to support the delivery of programs and services to you.
- If you are an employee or contractor, details such as identity, contact, employment and education history, registration and details, medical details, criminal history, finance (banking, tax, and superannuation) and other details.
- If you are a supporter of CCPC we may collect identity, contact and financial information (such as credit card) when a donation is made. We are guided by the Fundraising Institute of Australia Code of Conduct and use contact details to let supporters know about events and other fundraising campaigns by mail, email and SMS/MMS (they can opt-out at any time using our simple mechanism). If they choose not to provide identity or contact information, we cannot provide a receipt or details about upcoming events and opportunities.
- Other; anyone attending a CCPC event or site may be filmed or photographed. For individuals, we seek to obtain written consent prior to using their image for promotional purposes. For crowd scenes, in a public place, it would be impractical to seek consent and we may use these images and not include any personal details (such as name, even if known).

We may also keep a record of our communication or interaction with you.

Privacy Statement

When you use our website, we also collect (via cookies) information about your website use and browser preferences to improve our website function and experience.

Anonymity: In circumstances where we will have no need to contact you in the future, you have the right to anonymity or to use a pseudonym when interacting with us; provided that:

- Personal information is not required to provide you with the service.
- We are not restricted by law to deal with identified individuals.

How we Collect Information

We use methods for collecting personal information that are lawful and fair.

We obtain personal information in many ways including:

- In discussions with you (and/or your authorised representative/s).
- On forms you complete.
- At meetings and interviews.
- In written correspondence or by email.
- In conversations over the telephone or by email.
- In reports and referrals from third parties.

We also collect some information about website users via cookies to allow us to monitor and improve our website; but we do not link this information to your personal record.

Wherever possible, we collect personal information directly from you, or from your authorised representative. This means we will usually ask you to provide the information we need. If somebody else needs to be involved, we will seek your consent to talk to them.

We will always explain to you why we are collecting the information and how we plan to use it. Where relevant, we will also ensure you understand the consequences (if any) of providing incomplete or inaccurate information.

Sometimes we collect your information from a third party; but usually only if we have your consent, or we believe you would reasonably expect us to collect your information in this way. We may also do this if it is necessary for a specific purpose, such as the investigation of a privacy complaint.

If we receive personal information unsolicited from a third party, we will determine whether the information could reasonably have been collected if we had asked. If so, we will retain it for use. If not, the information will be de-identified or destroyed (provided it is not unlawful to do so).

When you interact with us, we may ask you to confirm some of your personal details. This is so that we can ensure that our records are complete, accurate and up to date; and also, so we can ensure that we are adding any new information we collect to the correct personal record.

Privacy Statement

Use and Storage of Personal Information

How we Hold and Protect Personal Information

We limit access to personal information to authorised individuals with a business need consistent with the reason the information was provided.

Your information may be stored as:

- Electronic records of personal details.
- Electronic records of consultation and session notes.
- Where relevant, electronic records of referrals, and of pathology and imaging results.
- Hard copy (paper) files (where original documentation is required for any reason).

How we Use Personal Information

We only use personal information for the purpose(s) for which it was given to us, or for purposes that are directly related to one of its functions or activities. So, if you access a service from CCPC, we use your information to provide you with healthcare or supports that meet your needs. We may use some of your information for related business activities, such as arranging a Medicare claim, or for clinical audits (where we measure and improve the quality of care that we provide).

Sharing of Personal Information (Disclosure)

Generally, personal information that is held by CCPC is not shared with others. We will disclose it only:

1. When it is necessary for a purpose related to the service that we are providing you, and
2. With your understanding and prior consent.

If you are unable to provide consent and provided CCPC is not aware that disclosure is against your wishes, we will share information where it is necessary to be able to provide care or treatment. In all circumstances, we aim to limit the amount of information disclosed to that which is necessary for the purpose of the disclosure.

When we Disclose Personal Information

We share personal information only when it is necessary as part of the service, we are providing to you. For example, we may disclose information to:

- Third parties involved in providing care or treatment (e.g. a carer who will need to administer medication or monitor symptoms).
- Other health service providers involved in care or treatment (e.g., treating specialists, allied health professionals, hospitals, community health services, pathology and diagnostic imaging services, pharmacies).
- Medicare, Veterans' Affairs, and other agencies that require evidence of treatment to pay for care, or to private health insurers.
- Other government entities that may support your health care (such as My Health Record).

Privacy Statement

- Contractors to whom CCPC outsources certain functions¹.
- Auditors or other persons involved in accrediting CCPC (for example, a person from an accreditation agency may need to review CCPCs information handling procedures which may involve accessing patient records).
- From time to time, medical researchers² carrying out approved research (where permitted under the Privacy Act).

In other circumstances where CCPC is expressly required or permitted to do so under the Privacy Act, we may also disclose personal information to other parties where we are legally required to do so, such as under a court order.

If you do not wish us to disclose information to a particular party, you can notify us of this; and we will advise you of any impact it may have to our ability to provide you with services.

How we Disclose Personal Information

Personal information may be shared in various ways, including:

- Person to person (including over the phone, or by email to a direct email address).
- By direct entry into a secure website that is only accessible to authorised users.
- Via secure messaging when available.
- In hard copy (in person, sent by mail, or delivered person-to-person).
- By facsimile.
- Via password-protected attachment to an email (with the password shared separately).

We take steps to ensure that each time any personal information is being shared, it is being shared with the right person at the right time and for the agreed purpose and that it is being transmitted securely.

We take precautions with the disclosure of identified information and ensure that any information that could identify you is only ever disclosed in person or transmitted in a secure manner.

Overseas Transfers: Under normal circumstances, we will not transfer any personal information overseas. We only transfer your personal information overseas if the transfer is:

- To you, or to one of your authorised representatives; or
- With your express consent.

¹ CCPC requires contractors that may have any access to personal information to sign non-disclosure agreements and comply with the Privacy Act, and does not permit them to subcontract their services.

² Unless a person specifically gives consent for identifiable personal information to be shared with medical researchers, we de-identify any such information before disclosing it.

Privacy Statement

Rights and Choices with Your Personal Information

You have the right to request access to the personal information we hold about you, and to request updates and corrections. You can also change your preferences and consents as needed.

How to Access Your Information

At any time, you can request to access the personal information we hold about you. This includes the details we have in our records that we have collected or created, as well as information about you that has been provided to us by other people, such as opinions provided by specialists.

You can request access by sending a written request to the Executive Manager–Corporate Services, at the details below. If you require assistance putting a request in writing, please contact us on (02) 4365 2294. We will aim to provide you with the requested information in an appropriate form within 30 days.

If providing access to the requested information requires a significant amount of time (such as to locate personal information or to collate or present it in an appropriate form), CCPC may charge a fee for providing access. We will advise you if this is the case before we start to act on your request.

Note that in rare circumstances, where it is permitted under the Privacy Act, it may not be possible to provide you with access to all, or parts of, the information from our records. If we are unable to provide access, we will advise why this is so.

How to Update Your Information

If the information that we hold about you is out of date, inaccurate, incomplete, irrelevant, or misleading, you can inform us of this, and it will be corrected. If you have changed your mind about information provided, or about consents you have given or refused, you can also inform us of that, and we will update your record.

Occasionally, we may ask you to provide certain information updates in writing (or to confirm them in writing or with a signature), as a way of ensuring that our records are accurate. In most instances, however, you can notify us verbally of changes required.

In the unlikely event that we disagree about the accuracy of certain information, we may require additional evidence before we make a change. In this case, you will be notified in writing.

Updating Health Information: We treat the updating of health information differently from other types of personal detail and will usually add an update rather than deleting or amending the original record. This is because, when in the future we review our records or need to provide a health service, we may need to access the (inaccurate) information we had at the time – for example, to see why a particular course of treatment was prescribed.

If the information you wish to update relates to your health, we will generally add the current or amended information to the record, and clearly associate it with the inaccurate information to ensure that all subsequent users of the information are aware of the amendment. We do not typically delete health information.

Rights Over Children's Information

We take particular care with determining who can exercise privacy rights regarding the personal information of children and young people (under 18 years old). We work to ensure that these rights are exercised by the young person wherever possible, and by the most appropriate person in each instance. We assess individually each case to determine whether a minor can exercise their privacy rights regarding personal information.

If you are under 18 years old, and you request access to or correction of your personal information, we would take into consideration:

- Any statutory obligations regarding whether you can consent, and
- Your maturity, and your ability to understand your rights and implications of exercising them.

If you are under 18 and another person requests access to your information, we will only disclose your information to them if we are permitted to do so under the Privacy Act, and:

- With your permission, or
- If they can demonstrate they have a legal right to it (e.g., evidence they are your parent or guardian).

If you are a person wishing to access or change the information held about a child, you may need to provide evidence of your identity and your relationship to the young person (and/or decision-making capacity) before we can provide you any information or action your request.

Notifiable Data Breaches

We take every effort to protect the personal information we hold, and to ensure it is only used and shared appropriately. If your personal information is accessed or disclosed inappropriately, and we believe that this breach of your privacy may result in harm, we will manage this in accordance with the requirements of the Privacy Act and will notify and update you accordingly in accordance with our Notifiable Data Breach Procedure.

Complaints

We take complaints and concerns regarding privacy seriously. If you believe that there has been a breach of this Statement, you should set out details of your complaint in writing and email it to feedback@ccpc.com.au.

Complaints that are received will be resolved in accordance with CCPCs Complaints Management Procedure and associated management and response protocols. Complaints will normally be investigated, and we aim to resolve them and communicate to the complainant within 30 days. We also have an internal review process if you are unhappy with the resolution.

Privacy Statement

It is a good idea to discuss any privacy concerns with us first, to see whether we can work together to resolve the issue; but if you do not feel your complaint has been adequately resolved or addressed, you can raise a complaint with either:

- Office of the Australian Information Commissioner (OAIC) via www.oaic.gov.au/privacy/privacy-complaints/ (complaints to OAIC must be in writing), or
- Health Care Complaints Commission on 1800 043 159 or via hccc.nsw.gov.au.
- Contact the NDIS Commission - If the complaint is about NDIS supports or services, you can contact the NDIS Commission by calling 1800 035 544 (free call from landlines) or TTY 133 677 (interpreters can be arranged).

If you have a hearing and/or speech impairment and are unable to make and receive phone calls, you can visit The National Relay Service and ask for 1800 035 544.

You can also contact the OAIC for information or support with privacy matters, either online at www.oaic.gov.au or by telephone on 1300 363 992.
